Northern Ireland

The Climate Action Seed Fund has been developed by the Community Foundation for Northern Ireland to empower grassroots organisations and changemakers to take meaningful action to launch transformative environmental projects.

The challenges we face can often seem insurmountable, but real, lasting change begins at the local level. Small actions, supported by small grants, can create powerful impact and help us build a greener, healthier future for all.

Local leaders and community groups are already taking steps to tackle climate change—whether by restoring ecosystems, reducing emissions, or promoting sustainable practices. But they often lack the resources, training, and support to amplify their work. That’s where the Climate Action Seed Fund comes in.

RÓISÍN WOOD

Chief Executive Officer

We’re offering a way to support these changemakers directly, providing the resources and funding they need to launch innovative environmental projects that will create meaningful, long-term impact in their communities.

This proposal is an invitation to be part of a larger movement—a movement where every small action counts toward a collective, sustainable future. Together, we can plant the seeds for a greener world.

Support the Climate Action Seed Fund

Communities across the world are already taking bold steps to fight the climate crisis, but they need our support.

Whether it’s through planting trees, reducing waste, or creating educational programmes, these local heroes are making a difference—but their efforts are often limited by resources.

By supporting the Climate Action Seed Fund, you help fund these grassroots projects that tackle climate change head-on.

We provide small grants to local organisations to help them take their ideas from vision to reality to affect positive change.

Suggested Donation Levels

- £500 can help fund the planting of trees or the restoration of a local habitat

- fund local environmental projects that restore ecosystems and reduce emissions
- equip changemakers with the tools, training, and resources they need to succeed
- amplify the voices of those leading sustainable change in their communities
- encourage long-term, community led resilience in the fight against climate change

By funding local environmental projects, we're not just responding to the climate crisis, we're investing in the future. We can create lasting change, restore ecosystems, reduce emissions, and build a more sustainable, greener world for our children.

Join with us and plant the seeds for a greener tomorrow.
